"This collection of images outlines the Hoop Dreams of my 12 year old self, and the 3 courts where I built the skills to become 1 of the top 50 eighth graders in the city of Philadelphia. Being selected as 1 of the top 50 allowed me to play in the city all star game at the Spectrum; and helped me make the decision to attend Roman Catholic High School to play basketball."

footlockerphilly Although today is the last day of Black History "Month", it continues and is celebrated all year long!

Today we highlight two photographers from Philly that have created their own history both locally and nationally.

Check out this feature on @phobymo, black female photographer from Philly who specializes in portraiture and concert work. Some of her work has made outlets like Vogue, Vanity Fair, Nylon, Essence, and Wall Street Journal to name a few.
