STAGE / SOUND BLUE PRINT

For the second year in a row, Spike Lee has put together another successful purple party in celebration of Prince's born day.

Pulling hundreds of people, draped in purple, from the neighborhood and bringing them together for a day of nothing but Prince classics.

With an entire block in Brooklyn looking purple, it was hard not to catch everyone's eye. From the marching band playing a Prince tune to a giant mural being painted, to Spike singing with the crowd & keeping them hype, to the the purple flower décor, all details were thoroughly planned & executed to ensure a memorable celebration in honor of Prince.
